

Tule River Tribe introduces design, construction firms for casino

Click here to view article

After breaking ground for its new casino located in Porterville last week, Eagle Mountain Casino is fast moving forward with the development of the casino.

The relocation of the casino to 40 acres of land located just south and adjacent to the Porterville Sports Complex has been 25 years in the making. The new casino will feature 1,750 slot machines, numerous table games, a 2,000-seat event center and restaurants throughout the 100,000 square foot property.

Why the Agua Caliente Casinos are embracing art as a way to draw in visitors

Look at the location tag for Agua Caliente Resort Casino Spa Rancho Mirage on Instagram and there are loads of recent pictures of people posing in front of a desert fan palm tree rising up from the desert landscape at sunset.

However, it's not a real desert scene, but rather a new mural from artist Autumn Martino that sits next to one of the resort's elevators near the hotel lobby

Click here to view article

Effort to block Sky River Casino's plans in Elk Grove rejected by D.C. appeals judges

Click here to view article

A federal appellate court Friday removed a final roadblock in the Wilton Rancheria tribe's effort to build its long-sought casino, rejecting a local group's effort to stop the Interior Department from acquiring the land that's now the site of the planned resort.

The three-judge D.C. Court of Appeals panel, in its 24-page opinion released Friday, turned back a lengthy legal fight by advocacy group Stand Up for California! and casino opponents Patty Johnson, Lynn Wheat and Joe Teixeira, to halt the transaction.