IGA 2022 review: Gaming gets the California Love

After heading to Las Vegas in 2021, NIGA (National Indian Gaming Association) hit the palm trees of Anaheim, California, this April for its showpiece tradeshow. And, in fact, the organisation got a facelift along the way, as organisers rebranded to the Indian Gaming Association (IGA) during the event.

Following the heavily iGaming-focused ICE London the previous week, IGA provided a familiar return to what show-goers were used to pre-pandemic – especially in the US; floors were filled (admittedly not as busily as usual) with huge land-based gaming cabinets, slot machines, craps tables and various other gaming-related offerings.
