

California Casino News

January 1-24, 2021

Chicken Ranch tribe unveils plans for new gaming resort, conference center

The Chicken Ranch Rancheria Me-Wuk Indians of California has unveiled plans for a new, state-of-the-art gaming resort and conference center in Jamestown that's slated to open in late 2023.

Click here to view article

Federal government approves Hard Rock casino proposed for south of Bakersfield

Click here to view article

The federal government has approved a plan by the Tejon Indian Tribe to operate a Hard Rock Casino resort 14 miles south of Bakersfield. Now it is up to Gov. Gavin Newsom, who must concur with the decision before the plan can become a reality.

How a tiny California tribe out-dealt Trump over their shared casino

Donald Trump hated tribal casinos until his face was splashed all over one.

In 1993, when the most famous thing about him was his real estate empire, Trump was called to testify before the House Native American Affairs subcommittee about the possible expansion of casinos owned by tribal leaders. He was characteristically bullying, baselessly alleging tribes were in league with the mafia and predicting it was set to be "the biggest scandal ever" since Al Capone

Click here to view article